Leominster Credit Union Selects Commodore Builders For Headquarters Expansion

March 24, 2009 – Leominster Credit Union has selected Commodore Builders as general contractor for its new executive office and operations building in downtown Leominster.

Commodore Builders will manage all aspects of the construction of a 28,500 square foot office building immediately adjacent to LCU’s current headquarters on Adams Street. The new building will feature a two-story atrium at its main entrance and an elevated connection to the current main office, which will also undergo significant interior and exterior renovations.

“Commodore Builders has a well-deserved reputation for outstanding work,” said Gordon R. Edmonds, LCU President and CEO. “We received proposals from a number of very qualified general contractors, and the evaluation process was rigorous. Commodore prevailed, and our Site Committee is confident it made the right choice.”

LCU’s Site Committee, comprising members of LCU’s board of directors, senior management and its facilities manager, received more than 32 inquiries from general contractors. Eight contractors were invited to meet with the Site Committee and the project architect, and six formal bids were received.

After meeting on March 18, 2009 with three finalists for a last round of reviews, the Site Committee selected Commodore Builders, which is based in Newton, Massachusetts.

“Undertaking a project like this says a lot for LCU’s commitment to its members and the community,” remarked Joe Albanese, Commodore Builders’ Founder and CEO. “Commodore Builders and LCU are alike in many ways -- agile, growing, and focused on service. We’re very pleased to be part of sustaining LCU’s legacy.”

Groundbreaking on the project is scheduled for April, with project completion targeted for late 2009 or early next year.
